Hello and Welcome

My name is Deborah. To start, I want to thank you for taking some of your time to read my profile. I have put this together so you can learn about me, meet my family, and see if I am the person you feel can give your baby the wonderful life you desire for your child.

Sharing special moments

I would be happy to meet with you in person and answer any of your questions if that would help you to feel more comfortable with getting to know me. I am also open to the idea of sharing occasional updates and photos of your child as he or she grows, so you can see and hear firsthand how the baby is doing.

To be or not to be

I believe that the decision to become a parent, or not to, is one of the toughest decisions a family or individual can make in life. That is why I have such profound respect and gratitude to you for taking the time to get to know me (and my family) as the person that you would consider to raise your child!

Motherhood

I have a strong desire to become a mother and share my life with a child. I am dedicated to giving a child a wonderful life with many opportunities to learn and grow from. I am confident that I can give a child a loving, supportive home in which he or she can thrive.

I can provide a child with my unconditional love, financial and emotional support, a quality education, and a safe, secure, love filled home. I will be there to guide this child throughout life and help them to become a self-confident person. I will be there to encourage my child to reach each goal they set out for.

About me:

I come from a large family, including four brothers. I was born in Canada, but grew up here, in the United States.

We are a very close knit family. Throughout our childhood we were raised with strong family values and were taught the importance of supporting one another through life's trials and tribulations. One of the many adages my mother would often repeat to us growing up is that "the greatest worth we have on this earth is our worth to one another." I truly believe in that with all my heart and try to live by her words in all areas of my life.

My mother was the 'pillar' of our family, and was not only fully devoted to us as a mother, but taught us to be devoted to one another. We lost her four years ago, but her spirit, her wisdom, and love live on in all of us.

She has given me strong family values and taught me unwavering maternal instincts.

Family

My family has been extremely supportive of my plans to adopt all through this process. I dream of the day I can tell them that I have been entrusted by someone special to become a mother. I am often asked for updates on my adoption journey. I can't wait to see the smiles on their faces when I can share news that I will be bringing home a new little one to join our big loving family!

My three brothers; David, Robert and Pierre all live nearby. They are all single with no children. My oldest brother Frank, lives in New Jersey with his wife and four children; Nicholas, Christopher, Angela, and Chase. Through the years he has become a best friend to me. I treasure the close relationships that I have with my niece and nephews. They are all excited about welcoming a new baby cousin into our family.

My father is a retired Episcopalian priest. He devoted his career to the church. He also has strong family values and imparted through his vocation and example, a sense of the importance of giving back to the community. Unfortunately, my parents divorced when I was twelve years old. While my father remained in our lives, my mother raised us alone. Her devotion and determination in raising me and my brothers has been an inspiration. She was a great role model for me.

Home

I live in a beautiful nice size apartment situated in family friendly neighborhood located in New York. My community is safe, friendly and ethnically diverse.

Within my building, I have several neighbors with children whom I have befriended; we look ahead to our children having play dates one day. Being centrally located I am close to many beautiful parks, playgrounds, zoos, shopping, beaches, and pools. Living in New York also allows me to experience all four seasons and enjoy many outdoor activities.

Education and Career

I have a high regard for education, and will make sure my child receives the best education available. Education was valued by both of my parents. My father holds Master's degrees in Pastoral Counseling and my mother obtained her Master's Degree in Social Work in her 50's after raising her five children.

Inspired by my parents' achievements, I followed in their footsteps and pursued a career in Human Services. I earned my Master's Degree in Psychology, followed by a Master's Degree in Social Work by age 30. My entire career has been focused predominantly in the area of child welfare. I have worked with many children and families in the domains of foster care and child abuse. Currently I work with the juvenile justice system providing services to teenagers. Our program is an alternative to placement for children and families who often just need 'one more chance.' While my career has prepared me to meet the unique needs of a child at any developmental stage, it also gives me an enormous amount of personal and professional satisfaction.

Sharing my heart

Lastly, and for the sake of being totally honest, I feel it is important to mention that I am single. While I very much believe in the institution of matrimony, I have not yet met the person with whom I would wish to spend the rest of my life. While I still do hope for that to happen in my life, my greatest focus over the past few years has been preparing for motherhood. I have chosen to completely devote myself to this adoption journey. If you were to choose me to raise your child, your child would become part of a large loving family. This child will have a grandfather, aunt, uncles and cousins to look up to and receive guidance from. I also have a very strong circle of friends who provide me with a great deal of support and will help form the loving group of people within which my child will be raised.
